On the home front, the Foreign Broadcast Information Service (FBIS) has an Analysis Group which systematically studies the content and behavior of broadcast and print media of the Soviet Union, China, and other key countries. This Group is unique in the Community in its exclusive, in-depth focus on the study of media. It has long concentrated on the communist countries, whose controlled, integrated media lend themselves to a methodology that seeks to establish correlations between public statements and regime intentions or actions. Relatively new analysis efforts now address media of key Arab countries and of some Central American states. FBIS analyzes current public statements and propaganda in the perspective of past statements and in the context of current political developments--identifying new elements, changes in formulations, and in general any departures from the norm that might provide indicators of policy shifts and help evaluate regime intentions in hostile situations.

Reference: Telephone conversation between [redacted] and [redacted] 3 February 1984. concerning request detailed below. 25X1 25X1 25X1

1. Enclosed are Chapters 21 and 27 from the book, A Handbook on Warning Intelligence, authored by Ms. Cynthia M. Grabo. This book was originally published as a classified textbook for use by the Defense Intelligence College. It is now intended to provide a declassified version of the book to the Association of Former Intelligence Officers (AFIO), who will arrange open publication. Prior to release to AFIO, the book will be processed through the formal public release clearance process of the Department of Defense.

2. Pages 21-5, 21-6, 21-13, 27-19, 27-26, and 27-28 of the enclosed chapters contain information, identified by red brackets, which is believed to have originated with the Central Intelligence Agency. Request this information be reviewed for declassification. If declassification cannot occur, request alternate unclassified language be provided if possible.

3. Other portions of the enclosed chapters have been screened and sanitized by competent DIA personnel and are considered unclassified.

4. Request your response be addressed to DIA, Attention: OS-3B, Pentagon Room 2A536, Washington, D.C. 20301. [redacted] 25X1
